Yes Andrew! I'm the Associate Director for Institutional Effectiveness at Radford University in Virginia.

12:40:01 From Daniel Walther (He/Him/His) to Everyone:
Sounds similar to our efforts with our student development plan that takes a holistic approach to the student experience and assists them with professional/vocational discernment

12:40:34 From Amelia Parnell to Everyone:
@Daniel - yes!

12:43:03 From Rene' Schmauder to Everyone:
What's left out is so important

12:44:46 From Amy_ Rensselaer to Everyone:
wouldn't those variables (transfer student and other demographics) be in the model? How robust are they?

12:46:18 From Amelia Parnell to Everyone:
@Amy - yes, the variables would be in the predictive model. But, with regard to the prescribed intervention that follows, the process for delivering it may not consider those variables strongly enough to be tailored for the student

12:46:56 From Daniel Walther (He/Him/His) to Everyone:
So, are you going to offer us a model or methodology that enables to capture where students really are and what they are actually doing?

12:47:12 From Gianina Baker to Everyone:
Please do feel free to post questions in Q&A as we continue our discussion!

12:53:38 From Karen W to Everyone:
excellent quote!

12:57:06 From Corinne to Everyone:
The ethical dimensions have to be addressed in defining and valuing criteria/ variables when thinking of using learning analytics

13:07:19 From Gianina Baker to Natasha Jankowski(Direct Message):

I missed the first part. Did he actually mention achievement analytics?

13:07:25 From Natasha Jankowski to Gianina Baker(Direct Message):

Not yet

13:15:53 From Gianina Baker to Everyone:

As we wrap up, please do add in your final questions!

13:15:57 From Marlene Clapp to Host and Panelists:

LOL my puppy interrupted a webinar panel I was on last week. I'm glad to see it's not just my dog and that it happens to rock stars like Natasha too 😊

13:16:37 From Natasha Jankowski to Everyone:

LOL thanks Marlene - good to know I am not alone!

13:18:22 From Karen W to Everyone:

Many faculty and staff don't know what to do with data, let alone students. I agree 1000000%.

13:18:52 From Andrew Wolf to Everyone:

Good point, Karen. I was thinking the same thing, particularly thinking about the importance of leadership and data literacy.

13:18:55 From Ruth Newberry to Everyone:

You are so right Natasha... we have to be responsible with "sharing/empowering" students and preparing them for what they will see!

13:23:46 From Karen W to Everyone:

Speaking of sharing resources, Gianina, can I get that quote from earlier?

13:23:47 From Tammy Salman to Everyone:

Yes, this is a lot to take in (in a good way!) My brain is churning...

Dr. Tressie McMillam Cottom's 2021 ACRL Keynote quote: "Any platform that we adopt is just a tool. It's also a container for shaping our values, politics, and ideas. One just does not adopt a learning management system. A LMS will shape a student's experience of learning and education and self-actualization. It will open up some avenues of learning and foreclose on others. The way I think about Learning analytics ...not just as a platform, as an ethical code, as a set of beliefs, that we are making with our students, our colleagues, and our peers and community, we would ask different questions. We would ask, what is the learning analytic platform measuring? What assumptions are embedded in what we are measuring? If learning analytics is about increasing academic success, a human rights centered question for that platform is then "how do you define success? What if our members of our community define success differently from those of the platform? A follow up question is then for practitioners is helping the com
